Imaging the future

The future of human services – where is your organisation going?
What do you need to think about?

A Presentation and Workshop by Michael Goldsworthy and Ian McLean

May 18th, 2016  9am Registration  Griffith Community Hall  55 Stuart St, Griffith ACT 2603

What is your image of the future? What do need to know, and do, to position your organisation as an effective, compassionate and significant contributor to the delivery of human services in the ACT in the short to medium term?

Those are the kinds of questions this presentation and workshop is intended to help you answer. What sort of work might be involved to do this? You will hear about one organisation’s journey. And for those interested – there will be opportunity to explore how to provide positive behaviour support for people with intellectual disability.

Register your attendance by emailing OTDADMIN@COMMUNITYSERVICES1.ORG

Michael Goldsworthy, Managing Director and Principal Consultant of Australian Strategic Services is a visionary, a strategist and a big picture thinker. What is the future of human services - not just disability but across the entire spectrum? Michael has a compelling analysis to present that you won’t want to miss if you want to position your organisation for a positive future in human services. He is widely known and acknowledged throughout Australia for his unique facilitation processes, his comprehensive understanding of the current/emerging and the future of disability, mental health, aged care, hospital and health care and related human service industries/sectors and for his innovative strategies, models and tools. Michael has worked with more than 6000 boards, CEOs and senior management teams of community businesses, across Australia over the last 26 years.

Ian McLean is Chief Executive Officer of Golden City Support Services (GCSS). Not only from more than 20 years’ experience – where GSCC has generated savings of millions of dollars in costs through effective behaviour support - but also drawing on extensive international research, Ian will share what works and what doesn’t work to improve the lives of people with intellectual disability with ‘challenging behaviours’.

Learn and discuss what you could do to implement support practices that provide outcomes of wellbeing, independence/self-determination, engagement/involvement and lifelong learning for people who use support in their day to day lives.
